THE MISSING PIECE

People can now take control of their medical history with My Medical HistoryQR app

Press Release: Seattle WA. 10th Oct, 2017

CEO Robert Pirolo at Lifeguard Global Inc., for over a decade I have been hearing from the so-called medical experts, "We need to get the patients more involved with their own medical care". How many times have we all heard this? Due to HIPAA laws and increased scrutiny from IT departments, it has become next to impossible for a person to add, edit or view their medical history, especially if you go to different hospitals or to an out of network doctor. Of course, the most frustrating part of it all, the page after page, questionnaire when you go to a new doctor's office or hospital. Then there's, "Be sure to come a half of hour early so you can fill out the paperwork". I have a novel idea; give the patient a choice, paper or electronic. Paper then has to be deciphered and typed manually into the patient's EHR. Additionally, if you are like me you're not walking around with you pills in your pocket to fill out the medications form. My guess is most forms are incomplete and inaccurate. This is a complete waste of time for the patient, clinic, hospital or doctor's office. What good is incomplete and inaccurate data? What is needed is accurate, verified and updated medical history. The only one who knows this for sure is you the patient. Finally I was so fed up with filling out form after form, of the same redundant questionnaires; I decided to do something about it. After 3 years of development we created our solution, a mobile app called "My Medical HistoryQR; Play Store, My All Medical HistoryQR iTunes. Our app allows a person to securely store their medical history, and medication they are currently taking in their phone. The data is not saved in a database or cloud, but in their own phone. It is password protected, and in addition, allows a person to display their medical history in one QR code and a separate QR code for medications to be scanned by a pharmacist's. The pharmacists can review the drugs one is currently taking, as well as a new prescribed one, for drug interaction. My Medical History-QR™ is the easiest way to add and carry your important medical history in a mobile phone. In addition you can add, edit and view any information that you enter. You and only you have control of what information is added and who can see it. Enter as much or as little information as you wish. My Medical History-QR™ can be lifesaving and the most important app in your phone. We urge everyone to always carry your medical history with you at all times.
